MISCELLANEOUS READING. THE STORMING OF CHAPULTEPEC AND SUR-RENDER OF THE CITY OF MEXICO. - The 13th and 14th days of September, 1847, just thirteen years since, the military pride and ambition of our country achieved its proudest

The age furnishes no parallel to the deeds of our army around the capital of Mexico .-It might well be doubted, if history, in all her voluminous records from the earliest times, could present exhibitions of bravery, judgment, tact and fortitude equal to those displayed to Scott's invincible army. A little handful of an army-only 7000 strong, penetrates into the centre of a populous empire, and captures and occupies the enemy's capital, with its 200,000 citizens, and quietly proceeds to organize and rule the same. There is no such instance-no such picture of the sublimity of true courage, in all the brilliant annals of man's glorious deeds! The morning of the 13th of September, 1847, dawned; it was the last day of the capital. Twiggs was still thundering at the to storm Chapultepec. The main building was about six hundred feet long, the whole nothing could have been stronger or more bastions, parapets, redoubts and batteries .-The cannon were manned by the most skill POTOMAC OYSTERS OF OTHER DAYS .- There | ful gunners in the Mexican army, among them several distinguished French artillerists. The hill was spotted with forts and outposts and honey-combed with mines. Gen. Scott resolved to storm the castle in two columns, the one assaulting on the west, led by General Pillow, preceded by a forlorn hope of 250 men, selected from Worth's regof Capt. Naylor's Philadelphia Rangers .-The second was intrusted to Quitman, who, SALE OF BUILDING LOTS .- Two building in a like manner, had a forlorn hope drawn the castle, and to come into the road on the cessary, or, if not, to cut off the enemy's retreat.

The cannonade on the Chapultepec was lar meeting of the Democratic association of resumed at the dawn of the 13th, and continued until 8 A. M., when the cessation in the firing was the signal for attack. Instantly the two columns rushed to the assault. The Americans gathered in clusters at the edge of the wood, the storming party picked men in front, with loads drawn and bayonets fixed; and close after them came the ninth, its A HUSBAND OUTWITTED .- At a late ball | gallant leader, Colonel Ransom, at the head. in Paris, a very stout gentleman, proprietor At this crisis Pillow fell severely wounded; of a bad catarrh, and a very charming wife, his second in command, Cadwalader, was at of the ascent.

Ransom, was still on the lead, pressing on. "Forward!" he shouted, and fell dead, shot through the brain. At this sight, the fury of the soldiers knew no bounds. The first battery was carried in an instant, and the crowd swept on, the rifle shots ringing sharp my's grape. In brief Chapultepec was conquered, and nobly did the gallant Pennsylvanian volunteers sustain their reputation. In less than a minute after the last wall was surmounted, the great flag of Mexico was hauled down, and the Stars and Stripes, shooting meteor-like to the sky, announced that Chapultepec had fallen.

The attack upon the city of Mexico followed. The morning had just dawned-it was on the 14th of September, 1847, when Scott issued his orders for Quitman to advance to the great square. The troops of Worth were directed to enter the town simultaneously. but to halt at the Almeda fort, within a few hundred yards of the plaza. This was done that Quitman might have the honor of hoisting the American flag on the National Palace, he having been the first to gain a foothold within the walls of the city. His division marched rapidly to the heart of the town, as if fearing to be anticipated, and at 7 A. M. planted the Stars and Stripes in the conquered capital. About nine the blast of a trumpet was heard, and immediately after, Scott entered the great square, escorted by a brilliant staff. He was easily recognized by his lofty form, and as the crowd looked on this celebrated General, they joined in the tumultuous huzzas with which his own troops greeted his advent. On the part of the Americans, it was a scene of the wildest excitement and enthusiasm. In the conquest of this renowned capital, they beheld the realization of a thousand dreams. The fall of their capital struck dismay into the hearts of the Mexicans. The mournful intelligence spread rapidly in all directions, and was received everywhere with lamentations and fears.
